The contemporary American short story takes the reader into familiar-seeming settings and then makes those places strange and new. In this class, our destinations include George Saunders's satirical amusement parks and Kelly Link's zombie-infested convenience stores. We will stomp around in these locations to examine what these stories say about American literature and also American life. We will read and examine approximately seven short-story collections, we will investigate the theme and style of these diverse works, and we will supply critical and creative written responses to the texts.	4	06:15PM-09:15PM	T	MART	209	D.
