English

Evening Division - Semester

As part of the core curriculum, all students are required to complete English 111, College Composition, and English 131, Workshop in Exposition and Argument, preferably in their first two semesters at Baldwin-Wallace College. Some students will have already completed the equivalent of English 111 or will be exempted from the requirement to take English 111. Students not required to take English 111 should strive to take English 131 in the first semester of their enrollment but no later than the second semester. Students who are required to take English 111 should strive to take English 111 in the first semester of enrollment but not later than the second semester. They should take English 131 no later than the third semester of enrollment.

Students who have fulfilled English 111 through receiving academic credit for transferred courses or PSEO or CLEP or IB or AP: English Composition may not enroll in English 111 for credit. Students who have been placed directly in English 131 by ACT or SAT results or through the “Challenge Option” receive no academic credit for English 111 but may elect to enroll in English 111 prior to taking English 131.

Students who have exempted both English 111 and 131 by ACT or SAT results or through the “Challenge Option” receive no academic credit for English 111 or English 131 but may elect to enroll in English 111 and/or English 131.

Challenge Option: Students who believe that they have been placed too low may challenge their placement by writing an essay under supervised conditions at designated times on registration days or during their first semester at Baldwin-Wallace College.

Religion

Evening Division - Minimester A

The Religion Department has thoroughly revised its curriculum, including major changes in the way that courses are numbered.

If students have already taken courses in the Religion Department, they should be careful not to repeat the same course under a new number, because you can only earn credit for a course once! The requirements for the Major and the Minor in Religion have also been significantly revised. Students are encouraged to contact the Religion Department for more information.
