Preq: Take CST-106 Course will meet March 4, 5, 8, 11 & 12

We live in an extremely diverse country, so understanding issues of diversity is absolutely essential for being an effective communicator in today's world. Through experiential exercises, field trips, discussions, and presentations students will learn issues of diversity that affect communications processes in their everyday lives. This course focuses on experiential learning. We will be visiting different cultural groups in the immediate area to observe cultural practices and discuss the underlying values. In addition, students will learn how to create and implement professional communication workshops concerned with diversity.

! POL-306-SE1 Judicial Processes 3 6:15PM-8:45PM M MC 114 T. Sutton

This course is designed to provide an intensive analysis of U.S. courts as legal and political institutions. How federal and state courts function, the selection and/or election of judges, how judges make decisions, and the tension between expertise and democratic voice are major elements of the course. A key theme throughout the course will be the question of what constitutes justice, and whether it is a goal, outcome, or byproduct of the American judicial system.

Evening Division - Minimester B

POL-209-BE1 Political History of Ohio 2 6:15PM-9:15PM W MC 200 T. Sutton

This course will explore the political, social, and economic history of the state of Ohio, from its roots as the Northwest Territory through its rise to economic and political prominence in the last 19th century, to its current political status as a midwestern "rust belt" state. The course will include analysis of the structure and dynamics of state political institutions and current issues of concern to Ohio. Recommended for middle childhood education majors with the teaching field of social studies and adolescent social studies majors.
