As a young woman, she refused to let his disapproval prevent her from attending Western Reserve Library School. In later years, when she was widowed during the height of the Great Depression, her education enabled her to obtain a job as a librarian and support her two teenage daughters. She also became Director of

As a student in 1933, Arline sang in the choir for the first Bach Festival. Arline continued to participate and attend 80 annual festivals in what has become the nation's oldest collegiate Bach Festival. A bequest from her estate made possible the first purchases of Steinway grand pianos toward BW's goal of becoming an All-Steinway School.
